

Is a cancer risk assessment right for you?

Many women are at higher risk of developing breast cancer but they don't know it. A risk assessment can guide a personalized breast care plan and cancer prevention actions.

What is a risk assessment? Simply stated, it's a survey that helps calculate your individual cancer risk. These are the kinds of questions you'll be asked:

- Personal health history
- Lifestyle & habits
- Family history of cancer

Based on your risk score, your health care team can advise you on next steps, which may include a personalized screening plan or genetic testing.
